Wife Was Away from Home Wednesday But Returned by Evening.

Up to a late hour Wednesday night Arthur Salsbery, the murderer of Constable William Kinney of Preston, was still at large, and no clue to his whereabouts had been found by the county officers.

On Wednesday Mrs. Salsbery, who is likely to be the principal witness in the case, disappeared from her home, taking with her the oldest child. She told the other children that she was going to Hartford and would return at night. She returned here late in the evening, accompanied by her boy, and was seen taking the 10:45 Western trolley, presumably to return to her home.

There were many reports in circulation on Wednesday, one which has not been verified, was that police had been located in a swamp in Preston by one of the townspeople. This report was started in the afternoon, but the officers contradicted it, and as yet the murderer is at large.

Norris W. Ryley, formerly a chemist at the Norwich branch of the United States Finishing company, who enlisted with Battery B, 103d regiment, Heavy artillery, has been decorated for extreme bravery in the big battle of April 20th.

The action in which Ryley displayed such conspicuous bravery as to win his decoration was the now memorable battle of Seicheprey, in the Toul sector, where a big German force attacked with the intention of crushing the Americans who were opposite them. The German attack was driven in with such force that the Americans were compelled for a time to give up the village, but they reorganized their troops at this point and in a counter-attack completely recovered the ground and were back in their original lines, when the heavily punished Germans were driven back into their own lines again.

WORK AMONG CHINESE

Described by M. Gardner Tewksbury, Who is at Coolies' Camps for Y. M. C. A.

Word has just been received from M. Gardner Tewksbury, a nephew of Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook of Norwich, who left Hartford Theological seminary last November for Y. M. C. A. work among the Chinese coolies in France. Until the first of April he had been working among the French troops, as the British government prohibited work among the coolies.

He writes: "Much to my surprise and joy yesterday noon at dinner, Mr. Hunt, the district secretary of the Y. M. C. A., told me that he would spend the afternoon with me on Chinese work. We went to four or five camps, a few miles south of where I was located. Our little Ford four-seater was started and off we went down the long avenues of trees and cobblestones—the latter none too dry for safety's sake.

"We wound around through various villages for some miles till we reached a narrow road into the hills and woods which led to the Chinese camps. It was wonderful that we reached there in cleanliness of body and sanity of mind, for the road was best in rivers and streams of slime and mud of the 'last fan' (liquid rice) variety. Nothing but a Ford could ever risk such a road in this damp weather.

"But we were well repaid for the discomforts of travel by a warm reception and a most interesting tour through the camp. In one of the Chinese carpenters were working on stools and tables for the recreation hut. This is a splendid, large and comfortable hut, with a separate compartment at the end for canteen. The stools and tables were very Chinese in flavor. I asked one of the crowd who swarmed around me like bees what the hut was used for. He said it was a 'fang' (playing house), but immediately several said no, it was only a 'kung fang' (empty house) with a little store at the end of it. It ought to be the center of any cheerful and cheer for the whole camp, and we will see that it is."

Mr. Tewksbury was born in North Tisbury, China. He was graduated from Nanjing college in 1912 and only American or European to ever graduate from a Chinese school. He received his degree from Yale in 1917. His father, Edward G. Tewksbury, is general secretary of the Chinese Sunday School union. His mother was Grace Holbrook of Norwich.

NORWICH HAS GIVEN 803 MEN TO SERVICE.

Is One-quarter of All Men in City of Draft Age.

Most people do not realize the number of men that the city of Norwich has given to the service of the country. Norwich, up to date, has furnished 803 men, which is over one-quarter of all the men in the city who are between the ages of 21 and 31. Of course, some of those who have enlisted are under these ages and some are over, but the majority of those in the service are included in these ages.

The draft board has inducted into military service exactly 206 men, 347 men have enlisted in the service, not including the militia. Approximately 250 left Norwich with the National guard, making a total of 803. When the 58 men leave for Camp Upton the last of this month Norwich will have furnished 861 men for Rancie Sam.

From appearances it is evident that by the first of July the local draft board will be forced to call on Class 2, as there only remain 147 available men who are physically qualified for general military service. There are 163 men in the limited service class. When the 38 are inducted into the service there will be less than 100 men left in Class 1.
